

Humour & Mood

Composed, unhurried, observational, time-rich. We trust the audience, letting silence do the work. Static frames. deadpan human absurdity, bordering on existential comedy. Time suspended. Our characters are in denial, some aware. The stillness of a golf stance is mimicked in the pacing of the film, we are selling stillness as confidence. People stuck in quietly comic rituals. Life repeating itself, mechanically in endless middles, not beginnings or endings. Until finally, it escalates to a feverish pitch, before dropping back into its original rhythm. The Key rule, Everyone else in frame ignores the behavior. No one reacts.
